The following movies are also wonderful resources to teach about the beautiful country of Colombia!*

Los Colores de la Montaña shows the beauty of Colombia and its people as well as the dangerous aspects of living in this South American nation. The story is told through the eyes of the children that live in a small, rural mountainous region in Colombia. The children witness the strong desire of their teacher to give them a voice by educating them, as well as the fear that exists among the people of their village due to landmines, paramilitary groups, and violence.

In María, Llena Eres de Gracia, a young Colombian girl named María leaves her small village in search of a means to help her family financially and she ends up being a drug mule on her way to the United States. This movie will enlighten students about the issues facing this dynamic country and will also expose students to the different dialect and accent of Colombian Spanish speakers. Students will be entertained by this touching story of a young girl searching for a better life far from home.
